

Yan Zeng is a Graduate Research Assistant in data collection and statistical analysis in The University of Tennessee's Forest Products Center. Yan is currently studying to obtain his second M.S. in Statistics in the College of Business Administration, University of Tennessee at Knoxville. He holds his M.S. in Industrial Engineering and M.S Minor in Statistics from The University of Nebraska-Lincoln (2009). He obtained his Bachelor of Engineering degree in Mechanical Engineering with the specialty in Industrial Design from Xi'an Jiao Tong University, China (2007). He got two years of research and data collection/analysis experiences from Industrial Engineering and Statistics research labs in the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and one year of SAS programming experience from working and consulting for National Committee for Quality Assurance in Washington, D.C. Yan's expertise is in lab investigation and statistical analysis of large data set with R, SAS, JMP, and SPSS.

