

Sophia (Xia) Huang is a Research Assistant in data collection, mapping and statistical analysis with The University of Tennessee's Forest Products Center. Ms. Huang is learning her M.S. in statistics from the University of Tennessee, College of Business Administration (2009). She holds her M.S. in Geography from the University of Tennessee (2008). She received her B.S. in Geographic Information System from the Beijing Normal University, China (2006). Her expertise is in statistical analysis of large data set by SAS, Matlab, and JMP. Meanwhile, she is proficient in geographical analysis with solid knowledge in Urban and Transportation Geography and the application of Geographic Information System.